WHAT IS TELECOMMUTING

Telecommuting is a term referring to a wide range of alternative office arrangements. The term is often used to symbolize the substitution of computer equipment and telecommunications technology for the traditional automobile or bus commute to the office.

In the past the traditional workplace was one in which we commuted to a single location and performed work tasks during a predetermined time frame each day.

Today, the workplace is rapidly expanding to include many workplace alternatives.

One alternative is the work-from-home situation where the same tasks that are performed in the office environment can now be performed in the comfort of your home.

SOME HISTORY ABOUT TELECOMMUTING

Whether you've been telecommuting for just a few days or for many years, or just beginning on your way into the telecommuting world, you're part of a major sociological trend. The move toward the anyplace, anytime workspace has transformed traditional working arrangements. Work is no longer a place. Work is simply something you do.

Today, about 10% of the workforce (more than nine million Americans) telecommute. There are another 14.2 million independent people who work from home. Roughly 23% of the working population in the U.S. work outside of the traditional office environment. Forecasters predict that there will be approximately 50-million telecommuters over the next decade.

A recent study commissioned by Home Business Association estimates that five million American businesses support some kind of telecommuting program. Workers interest in telecommuting is increasing as well. In addition, the federal government plans to have about 10% of its workforce telecommuting in the next five years.

WHAT'S DRIVING TELECOMMUTING?

More and more, private and public organizations are adopting telecommuting as a business strategy. There are a variety of reasons: the need for 24-hour customer support, technological advancements, increased moral of employees, worker's desire for increased flexibility, and the need to reduce overhead. Estimates show that an employee who works at home two days a week saves a company $12,000 a year. These savings result from increased productivity, reduced office space, and lower turnover.

Many companies use telecommuting as an incentive to attract and retain top talent who are unable to provide their skills locally in the employers office.

Long-distance relationships also avoid the costs of relocation, estimated at around $80,000 per employee.

Home-based work also gives organizations the ability to attract a wider range of workers including the physically challenged, parents with young children, people with eldercare responsibilities, and members of dual-career families.

Home-based telecommuters continue to perform work at home even when they have a cold or other minor ailment that may have kept them out of the office. In fact, telecommuters work longer hours and more workdays than the average employee. Studies have shown that telecommuters on average take two less sick days per year than office-based workers.

Companies who allow their employees to telecommute continue working even when disaster strikes. If a company's employees are widely dispersed, a company can keep going even if the offices are destroyed.

Environmental regulations have also encouraged many companies to find alternatives to commuting. Carol Browner, Administrator of the EPA explains that, "If 10% of the nation's workforce telecommuted one day a week, we would avoid the frustration of driving 24.4 million miles, we'd breathe air with 12,963 tons less air pollution and we'd conserve more than 1.2 million gallons of fuel each week."

THE FUTURE OF TELECOMMUTING

Telecommuting and remote work of all kinds is estimated to grow at an annual rate of 30% over the next ten years. Free from the constraints of a nine-to-five mentality, telecommuters will continue to show high productivity-ranging 15 to 25% higher than what they did at the office. Today you can work anywhere that has a power cord and a phone line.

WHAT DOES IT TAKE TO GET A JOB AS A TELECOMMUTER?

Most jobs that lend themselves to telecommuting deal with information management. The best way to find a telecommuting job is to locate an office job that can be done anywhere. Next, you need to develop a reputation as a self-motivating, reliable, professional worker. It can help to work for a company that supports or is at least open to the idea of telecommuting. Demonstrate your value to your boss first and then propose telecommuting on a trial basis for a day or two a week. More and more people are now applying to companies for telecommuting positions. All that needs to be done is to send your resume and cover letter to a company indicating your skills and your desire to telecommute. Search through help wanted ad's and the huge resource of the Internet for companies that are hiring telecommuters. The more individual people that express a desire to telecommute, the more companies will be open to exploring this alternative work solution.

APPROACHING YOUR CURRENT EMPLOYER ABOUT TELECOMMUTING

The vast majority of employers looking at telecommuting options today feel comfortable about selecting telecommuters from among their current in-office workforce. This makes sense, because it's easier for managers to feel comfortable about someone working away from the office if he/she is familiar with the work and the people they currently work with. In addition, these people have already demonstrated the ability to work independently and are otherwise qualified to telecommute. Today, more and more employers are now hiring people from the outside directly into telecommuter positions.

HOW CAN I CONVINCING MY MANAGER TO LET ME TELECOMMUTE?

First, figure out if and how telecommuting can help your manager and your organization. For example, will it help people to do more work or perform their work tasks better? will it help reduce the need for office space? Will it save them money? will it help attract and retain top-quality people? etc. If you can "sell" the benefits and show how telecommuting can help solve problems or improve working conditions, your manager is more likely to consider telecommuting options. Also, encourage your manager to try an experiment - ask if you can work as little as one day a week at home for a month. That is not a big risk for anyone, but it's often enough to get you started and get past the initial resistance.

HOW DO YOU DECIDE WHICH JOBS ARE BEST SUITED FOR TELECOMMUTING?

Jobs that are information-based jobs with a minimum amount of required face-to-face contact are good prospects. Also, look for jobs that are physically portable - that is, whatever the telecommuter needs to do the job can be taken home in a briefcase or box, or can be accessed via phone line. Some of the jobs best suited for telecommuters include the following:

- Advertising
- Architect
- Artists
- Billing Clerk
- Computer Aided Design
- Computer Programmers
- Calligraphers
- Clerical Positions
- Credit Collectors
- Copywriters

Caution: As you do your research into possible telecommuting or work-at-home jobs, be careful! Some of the jobs you might see advertised that stress the ability to work at home are legitimate, but many are not. Some of these "opportunities" are scams and rip-offs of the worst kind, so be wary about any "opportunity" that requires you to buy an expensive PC or pay a large amount of money up front.

WORKING & LIVING AT HOME

CREATING A WORKING ENVIRONMENT IN THE HOME

When the office is just down the hallway in your home, how do you avoid becoming a "workaholic"? Just because the "office" is in your home doesn't mean you need to spend more time at work. One of the keys to getting set up as an effective telecommuter is to find ways to create some separation between your work and the rest of your life.

Ideally, a separate room - with a door that can be closed - is the best way to do this. If you don't have that luxury, then you need some kind of visual separation so you can "close" the work area off from the rest of your home.

It also helps to set some time limits. Maybe coming to an agreement with yourself that you won't do any work after, say, 7:00 at night. If you get a late-night brainstorm or remember something that you should have done, just jot it down on a piece of paper and leave it for the morning - just as you would if you had that same late-night idea and had to wait until going into the office in the morning.

My Spouse Will Be At Home When I'm Working - Is This A Good Idea?

It depends on what's going on between you and your spouse or significant other. In some relationships, having more time together is a plus; in others, it isn't. It also depends on how well the two of you can define and agree on boundaries and roles when you're telecommuting. If your spouse expects that you'll be available to play tennis, go shopping, or do housework because you're "home", that could be a problem.

In many relationships, telecommuting is a real plus because it gives the couple a bit more time together than is normally available in today's busy households. It can be something as simple as a chance to have breakfast or lunch together, or take an afternoon break and go for a walk together.

It's best for you and your partner to discuss what's likely to happen when the two of you spend more time during the day at home. As with all else about telecommuting, a little time invested in the beginning can eliminate a lot of problems later.

Writing

ChildAuthor.Com started as a simple craft site for children. It is quickly evolving, thanks to many great writers, to a literary site for kids. We are expanding our topics to include articles ranging from crafts, to poetry, to short stories and science. The pay rate is .05 cents per accepted, edited word. Length ranges by topic. For example, craft articles may only have 30 words where a short story may be 1000+. It is strongly recommended that you sign up for the newsletter, as we have a hard time accepting articles from writers that don't read what they are writing for. Send full articles and short bios via email. Visit the site for additional guidelines. Visit the site for additional details.

Table of Contents

Cost-Effective Franchise Companies

1. A Nanny on the Net

Are you a member of the child-care industry, but want something to call your own? This up and coming opportunity may be just what you're looking for. A Nanny on the Net has been in business since 1997 and continues to grow each year with their franchise opportunity and business model.

Phone: 888-436-0222

2. Tower Cleaning Systems

If you've ever worked in the cleaning industry, either residential or commercial, you know how important it is for businesses to focus on making their business flourish, not clean their offices, etc. If you've got a knack for impeccable cleaning and detailing this opportunity may be for you. Tower Cleaning Systems prides themselves on franchise as well as offers plenty of help and support for those deciding to own and run their own business.

Website: <http://www.toweronline.com/tcs2.htm>

Phone: 800-355-4000

3. Jazzercise

You've definitely heard of this one, but have you ever truly thought about how fun it may be (not to mention the physical and mental benefits) to make more money than your current position and exercise to music with "your" paying clients? If you were active in high school and miss that aspect of your life, this may be your answer for combining fun and work together.

Website: http://www.jazzercise.com/become_franchise.htm

Phone: 760-476-1750

4. Candy Bouquet

Are you the one who always makes the eye-pleasing Holiday Treats? Have a knack for arranging flowers? Candy Bouquet may be something you want to look a little harder at when deciding on a perfect opportunity for yourself. This company has made one of the Entrepreneur Top Franchise's and is definitely an affordable one.

Phone: 877-CANDY01

5. SportsLife

If you're into Sports, this opportunity may be what you're after....dealing with others in the Sporting Goods industry and the options are almost limitless. This isn't a franchise opportunity, but a great business opportunity that doesn't give you boundaries, but way to get "in" on purchasing sporting equipment including uniforms at wholesale costs.

Website: <http://www.sportslife.com/>

Phone: 800-909-5433

6. Kindermusik

You may have heard of this one already as it has been growing in popularity here in the last couple of years. It's great concepts and parent-child involvement are allowing it to grow by the cheapest most effective advertising method out there: Word-of-Mouth. If you haven't heard of Kindermusik and you adore working with children, this may just be the right opportunity for you. Their instructors come from all different backgrounds and you don't have to be a musician or professor to start. You'll like the start-up costs as well as they are one of the most affordable in their industry.

Phone: 800-628-5687

7. Travel Lines Express

If you love to travel, a great organizer, and/or can't decide whether you'd like to serve the consumer or business market, this may be a great fit for you. You can serve both markets, enjoy great travel discounts, and earn money for those whom you make travel arrangements for. The cost is unsurpassed when it comes to franchise opportunities, and if you are or have been in this industry this may be worth looking into further.

Website: <http://www.travellinesexpress.com/franchiseopportunity.htm>

Phone: 561-482-9557

8. Décor-At-Your-Door International

Always had a knack for decorating? Can't seem to let your friends and family go without your advice and tips on what would look great in their home and where? Well, you may just be looking at something you love, can afford to start, and can do as a home-based business. Décor-At-Your-Door definitely has their competitors, but strongly shows why they are the number one choice of décor franchises. Definitely worth taking a look...window treatments, furniture patterns and fabrics, and flooring choices are at your fingertips for you to start a new business adventure in decorating.

Phone: 800-936-3326

9. The Senior's Choice

This company's claim of it being one of the most emotionally rewarding opportunities in the market today, I feel is very true. Senior care services are a very hot market right now and that is because more and more families are coming up with creative solutions to aging parents and family members. While this isn't the cheapest option out there, if you enjoy taking care of senior citizens and have currently been employed in the health related industry or even as an in-home care provider, this may just be what you're looking for to balance your life while working on your long-term career goals of owning your own business.

300 Contact Sources That Hire Mystery Shoppers

Some of the companies in this list will begin sending you surveys/shopping assignments right after you register. Once you have registered with many of companies, you will begin to receive many invitations to participate in surveys or to receive shopping assignments it is important that you check your email often.

Your email account will quickly become full. For this reason, we suggest that you set up a separate email account to be used for surveys and a separate for all your shopping assignments. You can get another email address from your ISP provider or you can set a free email account at Hotmail or Yahoo.

To receive survey/shopping assignments from any company in list you first must register with them. This is the hardest part of this program but it is absolutely necessary.

IMPORTANT:

Be sure to check your e-mail everyday, and act quickly companies will often send out assignments in e-mail.

If you don't already have an account at PayPal you should create a PayPal account account next. PayPal is free, and PayPal is the easiest way to send and receive money online.

Canadian and International Telecommuting Resources

If you live in Canada or another country outside the United States, here are some resources for information on and jobs in Telecommuting.

International Telecommuting Associations Web Sites

Association Francaise du Teletravail et des Tele-activities

Canadian Telework Association

Eurotelework Online

International Telework Association and Council

Italian Telework

International Telecommuting Job Resources

Many of the major job search web sites listed under the United States offer international job searches. If you are in the United States and looking for a job abroad, be sure to read any information posted on the sites about residency or working abroad.

Job Source Search for jobs in the United States (by state), Africa, Australia, Canada, China, Europe, Mexico, Russia, South America and many other countries.

Specific Regions:

Asia

Work Search This is the English version of the site. It isn't really a search engine but rather a resource to job search sites for Canada and the United States.

Asia/Pacific Rim Job Search Sites

Asia-Net Site says you need to download a special program to view but if you don't you can still view the site in English. The site searches in Asia, Pacific Rim, Australia, New Zealand, and the United States. Keep location and category boxes to "all", choose "English" (or whatever language you prefer) for the language. In the keyword box, "work at home" yielded the most results mostly in the U.S. and Japan.

Job Street Search Australia, Hong Kong, India, Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore and Thailand. To get the most results you need to register but it's free.

Australian Job Search Sites

Byron Employment Australia Only the advanced search yielded results. Leave "category" and "location" to "all". On "position basis" I used "contract". Under "keyword filter", I used keyword "work at home" and told the search that the result "must contain the exact phrase."

European Job Search Sites

Jobsite Group Large database of jobs throughout Europe. Keyword "telecommuting" yielded the best results.

United Kingdom Job Search Sites

Job Serve This site focuses in IT jobs in the United Kingdom.

How to Write A Resume

How to Write A Resume

Here's How:

1. First, take notes on your work experience - both paid and unpaid, full time and part time. Write down your responsibilities, job title and company information. Include everything!
2. Take notes on your education. Include degree or certificates, major or course emphasis, school names and courses relevant to career objectives.
3. Take notes on other accomplishments. Include membership in organizations, military service and any other special accomplishments.
4. From the notes, choose which skills are transferable (skills that are similar) to the job you are applying for - these are the most important points for your resume.
5. Begin resume by writing your full name, address, telephone number, fax and email at the top of the resume.
6. Write an objective. The objective is a short sentence describing what type of work you hope to obtain.
7. Begin work experience with your most recent job. Include the company specifics and your responsibilities - focus on the skills you have identified as transferable.

8. Continue to list all of your work experience job by job progressing backwards in time. Remember to focus on skills that are transferable.
9. Summarize your education, including important facts (degree type, specific courses studied) that are applicable to the job you are applying for.
10. Include other relevant information such as languages spoken, computer programming knowledge etc. under the heading: Additional Skills
11. Finish with the phrase: REFERENCES Available upon request
12. Your entire resume should ideally not be any longer than one page. If you have had a number of years of experience specific to the job you are applying for, two pages are also acceptable.
13. Spacing: ADDRESS (center of page in bold) OBJECTIVE double space EXPERIENCE double space EDUCATION double space ADDITIONAL SKILLS double space REFERENCES. Left align everything except name/address.

Tips:

1. Use dynamic action verbs such as: accomplished, collaborated, encouraged, established, facilitated, founded, managed, etc.
2. Do NOT use the subject 'I', use tenses in the past. Except for your present job. Example: Conducted routine inspections of on site equipment.

Resume Cover Letter

An individually typed cover letter typically accompanies each resume you send out. Your cover letter may make the difference between obtaining a job interview and having your resume ignored. It makes sense to devote the necessary time and effort to write effective cover letters.

A cover letter should complement, not duplicate your resume. Its purpose is to interpret the data-oriented, factual resume and add a personal touch. A cover letter is often your earliest written contact with a potential employer, creating a critical first impression.

Mr. John Doe
A.T. Kiley
222 West Dover Street
Chicago, IL 60606

Dear Mr. Doe:

I had the extraordinary opportunity to work closely these past two years with Jane Smith, an A.T. Kiley consultant in the Higher Education Practice, as a member of XYZ University's Presidential Search Committee. This was my first exposure to the consulting profession, and I think it is a perfect match for someone with my academic record, communication and leadership skills, and drive to succeed in a collegial and team-oriented environment.

In my curricular, co-curricular and professional achievements during the past four years I have shown initiative, creativity in problem solving and a commitment to building consensus and excellence throughout our college community and in a variety of settings. As an intern in the Office of the U.S. Deputy Secretary of Education, I worked with the Senior Advising team to provide accurate, effective and concise statistical and anecdotal data to a variety of constituents in order to support legislative proposals concerning the condition of America's public schools. I combined the written and oral skills. I have gained from courses in American Studies and Government with quantitative and analytical training in a high intensity environment.

As Vice President of Academic Affairs for the Student Government Association and a student representative on several college committees (including the one which nominated the sixth President of XYZ University), I have learned:

" to use language precisely and effectively

" to articulate myself to a range of audiences

" the value of integrity and persistence in working toward short- and long-term personal and institutional goals

The opportunity to effect positive change for a range of institutions is the most attractive aspect of consulting for me. Employees have described A.T. Kiley as "down to earth" and as having an "open culture." I feel lucky to have been part of a college community whose openness has allowed for measured risks and the candor necessary to achieve its goals, and I hope to begin my career in a similarly rigorous and collegial environment where I can learn from industry leaders. I look forward to exploring further my opportunities at A.T. Kiley and will call next week to see if it is possible to arrange an interview.

Sincerely,

Scam Alert

Internet Fraud

From the Federal Trade Commission: On June 25, 1998, the Federal Trade Commission released information regarding its growing concern over Internet fraud. The FTC told a House Committee that Internet business could increase from $2.6 billion in 1996 to $220 billion by 2001. The FTC's goal is to ensure that consumers feel safe from Internet fraud.

Regarding consumer education, the FTC maintains a website at www.ftc.gov and with cooperation with other agencies has created a second site at www.consumer.gov to provide information on consumer issues.

The FTC offers a great deal of information to protect consumers. Still, it is up to the consumer to protect him/herself by utilizing the information. If you have or think you have been scammed, www.ftc.gov offers information on how to report your experience not just to them but, to other consumer protection agencies as well.

E-Mail Get Rich-Schemes

Are you disappointed when you check your e-mail only to discover scrolling pages of "get rich quick" schemes? Perhaps, in your desire to work at home, you have actually read or even responded to one of these ads. I'll admit I did. The Better Business Bureau warns consumers to exercise the same cautions you would for mail and phone solicitations.

Below are the 12 scams that the FTC has identified as being the are most likely to arrive in consumers' e-mail boxes.

1. Business opportunities

These business opportunities make it sound easy to start a business that will bring lots of income without much work or cash outlay. The e-mail letters boast of fantastic earning claims of $100 a day, $1,000 a day, or more, and further claim that the business doesn't involve selling, meetings, or personal contact with others, or that someone else will do all the work. Many business opportunity solicitations claim to offer a way to make money in an Internet-related business. There usually is no specific information on what is involved. Instead the message provides a telephone number to call for more information. In many cases, you'll be told to leave your name and telephone number so that a salesperson can call you back with the sales pitch. The scam may vary from an elaborate pyramid scam to stuffing envelopes and more.

2. Bulk e-mail

Bulk e-mail ads offer to sell you lists of e-mail addresses to which you can send your own bulk ads. Some offer software that automates the sending of e-mail messages to thousands or millions of recipients. Others offer the service of sending bulk e-mail solicitations on your behalf. Some of these offers say, or imply, that you can make a lot of money using this marketing method.

The problem with these programs is that the spamming involved violates most ISP policies.

3. Chain letters

This is an internet version of the traditional chain letter. You're asked to send a small amount of money to each of four or five names on a list, replace one of the names on the list with your own, and then forward the revised message via bulk e-mail. The letter may claim that the scheme is legal or that it's been reviewed by a lawyer, or it may refer to sections of U.S. law that legitimize the scheme. Don't believe it.

As mentioned before, chain letters involving money are illegal and almost everyone who participates lose their money. The fact that a "product" may be changing hands in the transaction does not change the legality of these schemes. Its the promise of big bucks in exchange for adding your name to the list and sending money to others above you that makes it illegal.

4. Health and diet scams

Information on miracle pills that will help you lose weight effortlessly or cures for hair loss and impotence are filling e-mail boxes. But, the gimmicks don't work no matter what the testimonials or experts say.

5. Effortless income

These are some of the most enticing solicitations even though you don't know what is involved by the time you get to the end of the ad. They promise thousands of dollars per day, trips to exotic places, and great gimmicks to make it happen for you. Regardless of the 'system', its not likely to work. If it did, wouldn't every one be doing it? No matter what ads tell you, it takes time and effort to make money.

6. Free goods

Buying clubs are big business but you need to be careful that it is a true club and not a pyramid. The scam is that you receive an email to join (for a fee) a buying club and you will get free products. The trick is you need to recruit others to join too. In this scheme you are paying for the opportunity to profit in goods for recruiting people. In reality, most the money goes to the promoters and little to nothing goes to the participants. Remember, if the focus is on making a profit (money or otherwise) instead of buying or selling goods, its a pyramid.

7. Investment opportunities

Some of these come in the form of promoting offshore bank accounts. Others aren't as clear but report large rates of return. For the most part, these are Ponzi schemes in which early investors are paid with money received from later investors. It seems to work until there is no influx of money leaving the newest investors without any return. Usually the promoters close shop and skip town before the scheme falls apart only to re-open under another name and a different variation of the same scam.

8. Cable descrambler kits

For a small sum of money, you can buy a kit to assemble a cable descrambler that supposedly allows you to receive cable television transmissions without paying any subscription fee.

Usually the device won't work but even if it did, to use it would be illegal.

9. Guaranteed loans or credit, on easy terms

Some e-mail messages offer home-equity loans that don't require equity in your home. They also offer guaranteed, unsecured credit cards, regardless of your credit history. Usually, these are said to be offered by offshore banks. Sometimes they are combined with pyramid schemes, which offer you an opportunity to make money by attracting new participants to the scheme.

Most people who apply (and pay money) won't be approved for these loans. And as mentioned earlier, Ponzi schemes eventually fall apart.

10. Vacation prize promotions

Electronic certificates congratulating you on "winning" a low price vacation are among the scams arriving in your e-mail. In this scam, you will get substandard accommodations which can be upgraded for a fee. Also, you may have to pay more if you can't travel within the given time frame.

The Federal Trade Commission has free publications about recognizing fraudulent unsolicited commercial e-mail and other Internet-related subjects. Contact the FTC at 202-FTC-HELP (382-4357), or write: Consumer Response Center, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C. 20580
